Virtual Event

"Evaluative Thinking"

May 6th 2025
2PM-3:30PM PT

EVALUATIVE THINKING- It is not what we teach or how we teach, but how we think about our teaching that matters most.

So what and how should we think about our teaching? The answer: making learning visible. We must continuously make learning visible in our schools and classrooms so that we can evaluate the impact of our teaching on students' learning. This type of deliberate thinking is known as evaluative thinking and is the focus of this action-packed, mind-blowing institute. Making learning visible and engaging in evaluative thinking helps ensure that each student makes at least one year's worth of growth for each year of school. While the Visible Learning database provides a robust collection of what has the potential to work best in teaching and learning, moving from potential to impact requires us to move from deliberate thinking to engaging deliberate practices in our schools and classrooms that accelerate student learning.
