INTRODUCTION AND METHODOLOGY

A partner in the Northeastern United States seeks to train teachers to become diversity coaches for their respective school communities. Hanover Research (Hanover) identified and compared six reputable diversity and cultural identity training programs for the district leadership's consideration based on the following criteria:

This report summarizes and presents publicly available information from vendors and providers. Summary details are listed in tables on the following two pages, divided into training content/format and logistics. The summary tables also include links to training program websites. Individual profiles on the subsequent slides provide additional information on training content, formats, and logistics.
